Increase in Heavy Industry and House Rent, Recovery Sign

Goliaths of Industry, Slow to Awaken, Are Finally on March

HOUSES PROFITABLE

Rents Reach 84.4% of 1926 Figure—and Construction Is Resumed

This is the last of a series of six articles on the progress of economic recovery.

By CLAUDE A. JAGGER

Associated Press Financial Editor

NEW YORK.—(AP)—The twentieth century Goliath that is America's heavy industry yawns and stretches.

The roar of blast furnaces and the thunder of heavy freight trains testify to his renewed activity and bolster the hopes of business optimists for complete economic recovery.

But he is still far from wide awake. Heavy industry has been restored, and credit rates are down.

Idle Capital Wants Work

But with renewed stirrings of business enterprise, the old things no longer satisfy. Billions of banking and investment assets have been restored.

Idle capital is seeking employment, and credit rates are down.

Now capital is not yet flowing rapidly, but for every dollar raised by the issue of new securities in the first quarter of 1933, approximately $3.60 was raised in the first quarter of 1936.

For each dollar thus raised in the first quarter of 1936, approximately $8 was raised in 1933. Of course, it is now widely agreed the issuance of securities was excessive seven years ago, yet the current level is generally regarded as inadequate to bring the modernization movement to full flow.

Interest Rates Climb

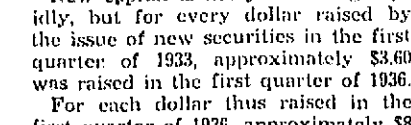

For each dollar of new money raised by security issue in the first quarter, about $2 went from securities bearing higher rates of interest to those bearing lower rates, showing that capital is eager for employment.

Both Washington and Wall street now are looking to heavy industry to carry on. "With heavy industries showing an increase in employment which began last summer," says Frances Perkins, secretary of labor, "we should be able to look forward to further gains. Employment in this group, the worst to suffer in a depression and the slowest to recover, is at a promising level and further gains would go far toward increasing employment in all other lines."

The figures for railway equipment purchasing are regarded as significant. Railway equipment is one of the heaviest of heavy industries. At the bottom of the depression, it was prac-

Open New Highway Shops Saturday

Governor to Head Guests at Fish-Fry Dedication Building

Invitation Affair to Be Held on Department Grounds 2 p.m. Saturday

DANCE ON FRIDAY

New Office and Shops Building Put Up by State and WPA Jointly

The fine new brick building on highway No. 67 at the western city limits which will house the offices and shops of District Three of the State Highway Department will be formally dedicated with a fish fry on the grounds at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon, among the expected guests being Governor J. M. Frazier and other high state officials.

The fish fry is an invitation affair, notices having gone out to state and local officials, the personnel of the district WPA office here, and various Hope citizens.

An entirely public affair, however, will help dedicate the new structure with a dance Friday night, beginning at 9:30 o'clock. Arranged by the highway district personnel, the dance will reveal to the public the shop's huge new floor, measuring 50 by 80 feet without obstructions. Solely to cover the orchestra cost, the highway employees are charging 75 cents admission, according to J. L. O'Neal, superintendent of construction on the building.

Johnson in Charge

Arrangements for Saturday's dedication fish fry are in charge of W. H. Johnson, district supervisor who is head of District Three office. Mr. Johnson announced to The Star that present plans are to begin moving of office and equipment into the new building Monday, May 11, and therefore the dedication is being held on Saturday, May 9.

The invited guests include: J. M. Frazier, governor of Arkansas; John E. Buxton, director of highways; John E. Buxton, supervisor of maintenance; J. A. Francis, equipment engineer; W. A. Zass, chief engineer; Capt. R. C. Limerick, state supervisor for the WPA; C. E. Johnson, chief justice of the Arkansas Supreme Court; Dave Block, of Wynne, Ark., chairman of the State Highway Commission.

Local guests include: Mayor Albert Graves; Director Claude Mann and other officials of District Seven (Hope) of the WPA; and the county judges from the eight counties comprising District Three of the State Highway Department—Hempstead, Howard, Lafayette, Little River, Miller, Nevada, Pike and Sevier.

WPA-State Project

The big brick building whose dedication will be observed Saturday was constructed jointly by the State Highway Department and the WPA.

It will accommodate the highway offices now located in the Carrigan building uptown on Elm street, and the highway shops located at the extreme southern end of Elm street.

M'Keller Moves to Cut Off Co-ops

But Bankhead Asserts U. S. Investment in Them Is Not Lost

WASHINGTON.—Saying the government has been "a veritable financial Aladdin's lamp" to the American Cotton Co-operative Association, Senator McKellar (Dem., Tenn.) said Tuesday he would propose congressional action to prohibit further federal aid to the association or its 13 affiliates.

McKellar said the government had lost millions in transactions with the cotton association.

His statement followed the filing of a minority report by Senator Bankhead (Dem., Ala.), member of the Senate Appropriations Subcommittee headed by McKellar which, at Memphis, Tenn., last fall conducted an investigation into the government advances to the cotton co-operators.

Bankhead denied various charges in the majority report, filed about a month ago by McKellar, who said it was "quite clear" that the A. C. C. A. and its affiliates were "not cotton co-operators," but with the practically unlimited backing of the Federal government, constitute simply another great cotton buyer or merchant.

Declaring the cotton associations "have rendered a noteworthy service" to farmers, Bankhead said there was no justification for "the assumption that capital loans to the co-operators are worthless, or that the government will ultimately lose thereby."

Plans Ready for Homecoming Event

Washington to Hold Its Annual Celebration This Sunday

A large number of Washington's former citizens are expected to attend her 14th annual Homecoming celebration next Sunday.

Washington has been holding Homecoming celebrations continuously each Mother's Day Sunday since 1923, when a few members of the Washington Club of Texarkana came over for a small reunion. Thereafter an increasing attendance has been on hand each year.

Church services will be held in the Presbyterian church, with the Rev. Thos. Brewster, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Hope, delivering the Homecoming sermon.

At a meeting of all Homecoming committees held in the Methodist church last Wednesday night, reports were heard from all these committees, and all reported an unusual amount of interest being manifest in the 1936 Homecoming, and all plans completed for Sunday.

It is impossible to more than approximate the number of visitors who will be present, but all committee members report that indications are the Homecoming Sunday will be attended as well, if not better, than any previously held.

All former citizens and members of their families are cordially invited to be present.

Ask $600 of Hope, $300 of Prescott, on Scout Program

Solicitation to Get Under Way in Both Cities Next Tuesday

"TO PAY OWN WAY"

Budget Will Accommodate Area Executive for One Year

A campaign to raise $600 to carry on boy scout work in the Hope area will be launched next Tuesday morning. It was decided at a meeting of business and professional men Thursday. Glenn Durham was appointed chairman of the drive.

This amount, as explained by O. J. Williams, national field scout executive, will be ample to employ a scout executive to promote and develop scouting in the Hope area for one year.

Assisting Mr. Durham in the drive will be 32 men who will be assigned to every section of Hope to solicit funds.

Further plans for the campaign will be outlined at a meeting Monday night at Hope city hall of all patrols and others interested in making the campaign a success.

Mr. Williams announced that a similar drive would start at Prescott next Tuesday morning in an effort to raise $300 for advancement of scout work there.

The scout program will include a scout master's training course, recently completed in Hope, court of honor, district field meets, camporalls, merit badge shows and other activities.

Asserts U. S. Has "Ruined" Island

Second Bill Introduced to Give Puerto Rico Its Freedom

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Charging the United States has "ruined" Puerto Rico, Representative Marcantonio (Rep., N. Y.) proposed in a bill introduced in the house Wednesday that the island be given complete independence in 80 days along with "a substantial indemnity."

The measure, Marcantonio said, was an "answer" to the administration-supported proposal of Chairman Tydings (Dem., Md.) of the Senate Territories Committee for an independence plebiscite in 1957—a suggestion which has stirred a Puerto Rican controversy.

Citing Relief Administration figures that 84.4 per cent of the approximately 1,800,000 population is unemployed, Marcantonio declared the Puerto Rican situation was "the shame of the Americas."

Puerto Rico, under his bill, would have continued free entry to the United States for her sugar and other products and no restrictions upon immigration, along with political freedom.

The president in 90 days would proclaim the island to be independent and all problems arising from the new status would be submitted to a joint commission for arbitration.

A spokesman for the independence advocates—Insular Senator Luis Munoz-Marin—commented here that the economic terms proposed were "far superior to those of the Tydings bill from the viewpoint of both Puerto Rico and the United States."

The big money bill was reported by the appropriations committee with $15,000,000 of the $1,500,000,000 original bill, which President Roosevelt has continued the work of relief activities shifted to the CCC.

To Give Opposition "Plenty of Rope"

Democrats Surrender Stage to G.O.P.'s Free-for-All Fight

By BYRON PRICE
Chief of Bureau, the Associated Press, Washington

The tactical policy of the Democratic high command obviously is to refrain, for the present, from exploding any bombshells.

Mr. Roosevelt's recent speeches before party rallies in Baltimore and New York surprised many listeners, who had expected him to open the campaign with some spectacular pronouncement.

Most of the administration spellbinders temporarily have retired from speechmaking entirely, and the publicity output from national party headquarters is noticeably smaller than formerly.

Even the much-advertised address of Secretary Roper before the chamber of commerce of the United States, expected by some to embody at least a hint of renewed industrial regulation by the government, turned out to be largely a treatise advising business how it might help itself.

On the industrial question, Secretary Perkins gave political circles a tip when she told a Chicago interviewer that Washington proposed to wait until the first of next year before deciding whether to propose anything new with respect to unemployment and relief.

Some politicians believe the President may speak out more vigorously on some issues in his acceptance speech after the Philadelphia convention, but meantime comparative political quiet seems in store on the Potomac.

An Old Practice

While all of this may appear odd for an administration which has produced so many political surprises, it is quite in accord with the orthodox practices of former campaign years.

Whenever a President is running for re-election, the normal thing is for the opposition to shoot off most of the pre-convention fireworks.

The party in power usually knows who its nominee will be, what its

Pair of Negroes Arrested Here in Attempt at Sale

Cattle Stolen From T. C. Short's Pasture Near Lewisville

AN ALL-NIGHT HIKE

Barney and Willie Ray Land in Jail at End of Long Trek

Two Lewisville negroes, Barney and Willie Ray, brothers, were arrested here Wednesday as they attempted to sell two head of cattle which they later confessed were stolen from the pasture of T. C. Short of near Lewisville, Constable Allen Shipp announced Thursday.

The negroes were returned to Lewisville upon their release to Sheriff R. H. Duty of Lafayette county.

The story leading up to the arrest and confession as told by Constable Allen Shipp, the arresting officer, was as follows:

"The negroes appeared at the door of Piggly Wiggly store early Wednesday morning after an all-night hike with the cattle from Lewisville."

"They attempted to sell the cattle to H. H. Higgins. Mr. Higgins became suspicious. He gave the negroes $1 and told them he would pay the balance when the bank opened."

"While waiting for the bank to open Mr. Higgins notified me. I took the negroes to police headquarters. There they told two different stories about where the cattle came from."

"We checked up on both stories and found them false. The negroes then confessed before myself, Prosecuting Attorney Ned Stewart, Police Chief John Ridgill, State Ranger Sewell and Policeman John Turner."

"The negroes said they took the cattle from the pasture of T. C. Short about 10:30 p. m. Tuesday night, and then the all-night hike to Hope, started. They reached Hope early Wednesday morning only to be arrested 15 minutes after their arrival," Mr. Shipp concluded.

Italy Is Expected to Annex Ethiopia

Flat Refusal to Allow Any League Discussion, Is Anticipated

ROME, Italy.—(Copyright Associated Press)—Total annexation of Ethiopia, the best informed sources said Thursday, will be decreed Saturday night by Italy's Grand Council of Fascism and the cabinet ministers.

Mussolini thereby will present to the League of Nations council meeting at Geneva Monday an accomplished fact which Italians believe will permit no League discussion.

This apparently authoritative prediction came upon the heels of reports that Italian troops in Ethiopia had seized complete control of the French-owned Addis Ababa-Djibouti railroad all the way to the French Somaliland border.

Your Baby's Health

By DR. MORRIS FISHER
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

A baby is born without habits. Its habits develop as a result of its care and training and, of course, conditions under which it lives.

We form habits by doing the same thing over and over again, imitating actions of other people. Therefore, the child begins to acquire habits on the day that it is born. If it is to have good habits, parents must plan accordingly.

The baby should be fed at certain hours at a regular time. It should be put to bed at a regular time. It should be bathed every day at the same hour.

It should be trained to use the toilet as soon as the mother is strong enough to begin such training. In later articles, the methods of such training will be discussed in detail.

At birth, the normal baby can cry, nurse, sleep, move the arms and legs, and sometimes lift its head very slightly. Babies at birth apparently are able to distinguish between light and dark, but they are not able to fix their attention on any single object. Inability to control the muscles of the eye may give the young baby a squint, or its eyes even may seem to be crossed. This, however, should not frighten the mother, because it is only normal.

The sense of taste is not developed in little babies, but they seem to be able to distinguish between sweet, sour and bitter. Our sense of taste includes not only these fundamental traits, but also the odor of food and the feel of the food on the tongue. Such abilities develop later with education.

A little baby can feel pain, but not as acutely as can babies who are older.

An infant is startled by a loud noise, but does not appreciate small variations in the sense of hearing. Babies recognize noises and voices very soon after birth, but they are unable to recognize particular sounds for two or three months.

Your Children

By Olive Roberts Barton

There is a remarkable change for the better in the general posture of children in the last two decades.

Twenty years ago, almost nothing was known of vitamins and the life-saving properties of cod-liver oil and sunlight. Babies then were either fed too much of the wrong foods or too little of the right; as a result a great percentage of children either were shoulder braces to "make them stand straight" (as though they could, or leg braces to bring poor, curved, rachitic bones back to normal.

Observe today, a school let out. Watch the hundreds of small figures in line suddenly rocket in all directions. Twenty, and certainly not thirty, years ago would such a group have held their heads so high, their backs so straight or moved their legs so steadily as the youngsters of today? No.

That New Neckline

When I first see a child I look almost instantly to see if his head is set "straight" on his neck. Nothing thrills me more than what I call the new neckline. It is a source of constant wonder to me to note the absence of the old ten-or-fifteen degree forward angle, as though Atlas were trying to balance his world at a risk to gravity.

So be thankful with me, dear mothers, that our children are the straight little ramrods they are. Be grateful that you live in an age when science has harnessed fish-oil and sunlight and put nature to work for you.

Yes, it all happened in Mary's and David's babyhood. It was what you couldn't see at the time when the doctor insisted on the oil and the diet and the sun. When you fussed on tired days because it all seemed a bit absurd and too much trouble to bother with.

Regimen Produces Results

If there is a baby in the family now—perhaps there are still times when all this business of strained vegetables, milk, prepared, so-and-thus, orange juice, oil, sunbaths and what not—annoys you to death.

If you are attacked by periods of discouragement, then please think ahead. Don't you picture your young David as a sort of Greck god? Head up, chin where it belongs, shoulders naturally back, stomach in, hips in and legs straight and strong?

Barring accident, your baby will be that way. All the regimen for the young has results as sure as summer. It is not guess-work and not bad. The baby carefully nourished, rested and sunned; the little child correctly fed, rested and exercised; the youth's appetite wholesomely satisfied and his hours regulated—all this is the story of strength and health.

And through it runs the plot of the vitamins, life-giving forces caught and held in food, sun and air.

A Book a Day

By Bruce Catton

A strange restlessness seizes many of our best citizens about this time of year. They get to day-dreaming, they babble incoherently about sparkling streams and mossy banks, and they don't get over it until they take red and reel in hand and go out to haul a few brook trout out of the water.

For such citizens there is available a timely and interesting book—"The Modern Angler," by John Alden Knight (Scribner's, $2.75).

Jimmy Donahue, an expert fisherman, way back, discusses the book as follows:

"Knight has done a good job of making clear to fly fishermen just what to use in the way of common sense in working stream or lake.

"There's a paragraph on nymph fishing in which he reiterates the necessity of using a long, fine leader in this type of angling; there's a section on bass in which he states emphatically that the fly rod angler will take two bass to the bait fisherman's one; and there's some dope on taking large trout that most modern Isaac Waltons never thought of.

"In addition to the excellent text, there are some fine photographs, including two showing just how to make the roll cast, an accomplishment that is difficult for the average fly caster.

"Last but not least, there are some pages devoted to Knight's pet 'Solunar Theory.' Knight has worked out a table showing the effects of the moon on inland waters. His theory, tested by thousands of anglers, indicates phases of the moon that are propitious for fishing."

Hollywood

By Paul Harrison

HOLLYWOOD—Short takes: One of the outlying gambling spots has been playing in exceptional luck lately. On evenings when the dealers and croupiers have raked in sizeable winnings for the house, and when the suckers are beginning to play rather grimly, and the luck of the house begins to turn—when these things happen, a tip is received that deputy sheriffs are coming out for a visit.

So the gaming paraphernalia is whisked out of sight, and the Hollywood lady and gentleman turn to more innocuous pleasures. Pretty soon in state a couple of burlesque who look like deputy sheriffs. In fact, they look too dogged much like deputy sheriffs. There are ex-customers of the establishment who swear they have seen those fellows working as character extras around the studios.

Charlie Chaplin and Paulette Goddard, marital status and intentions still secret, return soon and will go right to work on the story Chaplin has been writing. "Boxoffice returns on 'Modern Times' are lower than expected, and have proved that even the prestige of a Chaplin can suffer in a few years. In the next picture he'll talk. Movies will be dryer soon. Anticipating protests from reformers, the Hays office has clamped down on drinking scenes not absolutely essential to the narratives of pictures.

Unlike Hollywood

Of all illustrious flickerites, the easiest to reach by telephone are Irving Thalberg and Norma Shearer—if you know the number. They usually answer calls personally. . . . Noel Madison, the film gangster, never shot a gun. He collects stamps. A salute to the newscasts, now quietly celebrating the 25th anniversary of their

Who Killed Cock-Robin?

found by Charles Pathe.

Crazy About Horses

The racing season costs the studios a nice little fortune in time wasted by employees poring over charts and telephoning bets. But the current headache of the efficiency specialists is politics. Too many dollar-a-minute minds are speculating on the courses of statesmanship during working hours.

Bulletins and executive memos remind employees that they're paid to work, not talk. Only when the movie industry itself is involved in politics, as it was in abetting the defeat of Upton Sinclair with shorts, pep talks and employee contributions, is it willing to pay for political meditation.

Revival

Casting notes: "Return of the Thin

Man" will bring William Powell and Myrna Loy together again. Next for Clark Gable and Joan Crawford—"Saratoga," a yarn about racing. Miss Crawford, incidentally, is studying voice seriously. Makes a recording every week and notes the improvement.

Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers, separately, have won now RKO contracts stipulating fewer pictures and a lot more money. He'll do three, she four, costarring in two of them. Marlene Dietrich may go to London for one picture, but she'll be back for three more with Paramount.

Lily Pons is Hollywood-bound the minute she finishes that St. Louis engagement. They'll have the seal down at the station as chairman of the welcoming committee.

Paid for Fun

The actor most in demand for the past year, socially, has been Clifton Webb. But he hasn't made a single picture. I'm told there's nothing quite like being paid $1500 a week for going to parties.

Clark Gable is actually driving the pristine $25 flivver that Carole Lombard gave him as a gag. He has had the valves ground and the body painted white. The result is terrific, if not colossal. Mr. Gable drives it everywhere, but hasn't yet dared ask his chauffeur to take the wheel.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

LINDA BOWLING, 20 years old, pretty, is left almost penniless by the sudden death of her father.

PERFECT GARDINER, newspaper reporter, helps her get a job writing society news. Linda is in love with DIX CARTER, but he goes abroad to study singing. When Peter asks her to marry him she agrees, but postpones the wedding.

HONEY HARMON, film star, comes to Newtown, making "personal appearance" tour. She buys a scenario written by Linda. Linda goes to Hollywood and there, expressing ideas that are really Peter's, she acquires a reputation for being able to discover new stars.

At a party given by Honey Harmon, Linda meets BASIL THORNE, director. She goes out into the night alone. Suddenly Thorne appears beside her, takes her in his arms and kisses her. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XIV

Linda refused to accept the threat in Honey's voice. There was no reason for it; therefore it couldn't exist. Smiling and friendly, she said good night to Honey and to Basil Thorne separately, and went to her room. Sunday she pleaded work, breakfasted privately, and spent the morning resting. In the afternoon she gathered up a foursox for bridge and at 5 she left without saying more than the most casual banalities to Basil Thorne.

But, returned to her apartment in Beverly Hills, her gaze wandered toward the telephone and each time it rang, exhilaration lifted her swiftly and left her as swiftly as she heard a voice that was not Thorne's.

For five days Thorne didn't telephone her. That didn't surprise Linda. She expected that he would play his game that way. He knew he had made an impression; now he would let her wonder a bit. He reckoned without Linda's purposefulness. Knowing the situation between Honey and Thorne, she decided she would not see him.

BUT for once Linda did not abide by her own decision. Basil Thorne telephoned her the sixth day of that week and asked her to dine at his house. To her own surprise, she accepted, and spent the next hour in a fever of dressing. Her hair wouldn't behave. The red frock looked too bold, the white one too virginal, the black one too dressed-up. She wore a frosty gray, planned violets at the waist, and flung a mink cape over her shoulders.

Speeding over the smooth roads to Brentwood and Thorne's palatial "shack," as she called the 18 rooms, she reminded herself that she was a grown woman, capable of handling any situation, and that a man only took advantage of a woman when the woman wanted him to. While many men had made love to her in Hollywood, none had presumed to treat her as a woman other than she was. And while she was telling herself these things, her excitement mounted and made her flushed and lovely when she stepped into the great hall of Thorne's house.

He was not there to greet her. Linda was accustomed to bad manners. She had met them frequently in the last year, but she was astonished that Thorne had been guilty of such bad taste. A Chinese butler took her wrap. She touched a lipstick to her mouth, patted her hair and lit a cigarette. Then she strolled into the living-room.

There was an eight-foot lounge before the hearth and, reposing in unlovely slumber, dressed for dinner with a dressing gown in place of his dinner jacket, was her host! He was snoring gently. Not that the "gentle" part helped. He might have trumpeted and the effect would have been no worse. Fastidious Linda shuddered, and was lost to him.

He was aware of her then and opened his eyes, shook his head, rose unsteadily to his feet, and spoke thickly. "Sorry, Little Linda. Dropped off to a nap. Be all right in a minute." His words slurred slightly and he roared, "Cock-tails!"

Linda took one from the tray and sipped it. She was stricken to silence. The evening had gone completely flat. She watched Thorne gulp two of the cocktails in quick succession, saw his hand steady and his eyes cloud.

She didn't quite know what to do, but when he pulled her down on the lounge beside him she slipped from his grasp, smiling, and, still smiling, left him. He didn't realize until she was well down the road in search of a telephone that she had gone.

That finished Basil Thorne with Linda, but it did not remove him from her life. And that week had awakened in her a loneliness, a need for affection to have and to bestow.

The next day he telephoned. He called her at the studio, and he called her at home. He sent her a charming note of apology and enough flowers to lend a funeral effect to her four-room apartment. But she refused to talk to him or see him.

After that she accepted no invitations until she was certain that the guest list did not include his name. She saw him at lunch at the Brown Derby. She met him at the Los Angeles Athletic Club. He sat two tables away from her at the Clover Club, and each time she nodded and smiled, but was careful to avoid having to speak to him. Linda had learned that one does not make enemies in Hollywood.

For many weeks nothing happened to disturb the smooth rouline of her way. She had much work to do, and worked hard. She had discovered an elderly actress in the ranks of extras and was writing her first big role for her. She was very careful these days to pick her way surely through the precincts of judgment. She was a success, but, one slip, and she knew she would find her work undone.

HONEY HARMON called to tell her that Pete Gardiner's play, "Rememberance," was being done by the Theater Guild on Broadway. Linda thanked her, had a moment of being happy that Pete had arrived, made a note to send him a telegram, asked her secretary to remind her to send it, and forgot all about it.

That was at the time that "Take a Letter" was finally being filmed and Linda found herself acting as co-producer. She was on the set all day, in the projection room watching the rushes by night, and squeezing sleep in when she could. That picture was all hers.

Young, slim, executive, she was as attractive to the extra girls as the star herself. They called out shy greetings to her, found ways to wait on her. She was practically a producer. If she liked a girl, she might help her.

"Miss Bourne, there's an extra, a boy, who lives at my boarding house who says he used to know you," one of them said to her one morning. "His name is Dixon Carter."

Miss Bourne didn't flutter a single dark eyelash.

"Really? Dix Carter? Of course he knew me! We were friends when he was in college. I didn't know he was in Hollywood. I'd like to see him some time."

Linda waited for the next line as though it were not terribly important to her.

"I'll tell him if you don't mind. I know he'd like to see you."

Linda smiled and walked away. She wanted to tell the girl her telephone number and address, but she didn't dare. Dix would know where to reach her if he wanted to. The girl had said Dix was an extra. That perplexed her, and she tried to forget it. She tried not to want to see him. But the very next morning, when he came, she told her secretary to show him in and take a message to someone four floors away and wait for an answer.

"Hello, Dix," she said.

"Hello, Linda," he answered. "I always thought you were beautiful, but then I thought I had only imagined it. . . . But, you're just the way I've been thinking of you every day since . . ."

Linda didn't say anything. She couldn't say "I still love you, too."

Southern Accent Dropped in Films

New Beauties Will Have to Follow Example of Margaret Sullivan

By ROBBIN COONS
Associated Press Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD—There are three new Dixie belles in filmland, and their biggest job is to ring in accents clear.

They have cleared the first hurdle in their path to film careers, with the renewal of their optional contracts for another three months. And from now on, much will depend on their success in dropping Dixie drawls they brought from Louisiana.

So Jeanne Perkins from Baton Rouge, Wilma Francis from New Orleans, and Ann Evers, from Clarksville, Va., by way of New Orleans, are watching their 'I's and their 'final g's' and sounding their consonants with determination and zeal.

Phyllis Loughton, head of the Paramount school for stock contract players, is sure the trio can overcome what she considers the greatest handicap to any player: an English or a southern accent.

Southerners Not Sought

"We don't sign accents as a rule," she says. "Generally speaking, the southern girl and the English girl have less chance than others in pictures. These girls were signed because they are unusually attractive and talented, but they must overcome their accents before there can be a real place for them."

The "southern drawl," charming as it is in fiction and often in real life, becomes a handicap because a film player must be easily understood in dialogue—and, says Miss Loughton, in many parts of the country the drawl is regarded as a foreign language.

Overcoming the accent, she emphasizes, is "up to the girls individually." One method she uses is to have the girls listen to records of their own speaking voices, but this is a rare expedient because it is apt to make the speaker self-conscious.

Try Vocal Exercises

"For the most part I suggest exercises," says the teacher. "Sister-Susie, sewing-shirts-for-soldiers, and other routines in enunciation. Imitation of good diction is the finest method—I tell them to see and hear films of Helen Hayes, Margaret Sullivan, Ann Harding, John Barrymore, Paul Muni, Franchot Tone, and other actors I consider have excellent diction. Our policy with an accent is always to make haste slowly."

"But they can do it. Ann Evers has had training in New York already, and Wilma Francis and little Jeanne Perkins are very willing workers. They have some good examples to follow: Miriam Hopkins, Margaret Sullivan, Gertrude Michael, Gail Patrick—all southern girls who lost or are losing their accents."

Cucumbers were a favorite dish of the Roman Emperor Tiberius.

Mirrors

I sometime feel that mirrors
Are prone to telling lies;
A man best sees himself
When he has shut his eyes.

True mirrors I have found,
Flash suddenly to sight;
Myself looked out at me
From a tinselled stage one night.

Again, while I was reading
I gave a startled look—
For there I was, reflected In the pages of a book.

And a well-remembered mirror
To which I once was led
Was just some startling words
An honest child had said.

Warner Baxter's Film at Saenger

"Robin Hood of El Dorado" Is Story of California Outlaws

Lifted bodily from the most romantic era of America's frontier history, "Robin Hood of El Dorado," starring Warner Baxter, comes to the Saenger Thursday and Friday to take

Ann Loring and Warner Baxter in
"Robin Hood of El Dorado"

its place among the truly magnificent achievements of the talking screen.

Warner Baxter turns in the greatest characterization of his career as the dashing goodbad man who rode like an avenging angel through the roaring gold towns of California in the days of '49, leading a wild outlaw army of 400 men. It is a role that blends romance with fierceness, tenderness with hate, and to it Baxter adds a delightful charm that is certain to captivate feminine hearts.

In the supporting cast are several players who contribute outstanding performances—Ann Loring, a newcomer who demonstrates a dramatic depth that seems to destine her for the brightest; Margie, the Spanish dancing beauty who has become a splendid dramatic actress; Bruce Cabot, J. Carrol Nash, Charles Linden, Edgar Kennedy, Eric Trowbridge, Harvey
Stephens and many others.

LOST DREAMS

By Helen Welshimer

IF I could find a lost Elysium,
Where all the loves of old days used to stray.
Would you be roaming in that distant gloaming,
And I, as I was, in that yesterday?

OR would you only find the living lovers,
Who knew the way to make their dreams come true?
And would I search and search, dear heart, forever,
Calling, yet not ever finding you?

AND would you hunt me in that fairy, far-land,
Or think it just a story long re-told?
A dream you had one early summer evening,
That you've forgotten, now you've grown so old!

Men Lost Unless They Change Life

Willful Rejection of Christ
Is the Deadly Sin, Says
Evangelist

"There are men sitting right here tonight who are as much lost as if they had been in hell for a thousand years," because they do not even believe in Jesus as the Christ, have never accepted him as their Saviour and never have made any change in their ways of living or getting along," said Dr. Clyde Lee Fife in a heavy-hitting sermon Wednesday night in the revival now on at First Christian church to an ever-increasing crowd.

"If the crowd keeps on increasing it has the last two nights, we are going to have to put some side boards on this church to make room to hold the people. Ma used to say it was bad luck to change a man's nest but I have changed a lot of them and seen the old hens hatch out fine. So, if we do have to change to a bigger place, we will just change, but only as a last resort.

Dr. Fife again sang sweetly with the world's finest guitar. His songs Wednesday night were: "Silver Haired Daddy of Mine" and "Shake Hands With Mother Again." His guitar is made of ebony, trimmed in gold and pearl and is gorgeous in tone like an Italian harp.

"The sin that God can not forgive in this life nor in the life to come is the willful, constant and final rejection of God, of Christ, and of the Holy Spirit. It simply means that you say "Good-bye" to God, to the hope of ever seeing your old mother or loved ones in glory and that you lie down in death with no more hope than a bull in a field, to lie in a rotting Christless shroud in a black Christless grave and go out forever into a starless night. Oh, God, what does make men want to live and die like that when through faith in God and His dearly beloved Son, our Lord Jesus Christ, they could sing forever around the throne of God with those to whom John refers when he said: "These are they who have come up through great tribulation and have washed their robes white in the blood of the Lamb."

"I saw eight pastors of eight churches in Longmont, Colo., go and invite one young man in our meetings there one night to accept Christ. That was Sunday night. On Tuesday night they laid him down low in a Christ-less grave and he went out into a Christless eternity.

"God can not forgive this sin because of the great disrespect shown to God; because there is no post-mortem gospel to be preached and because there is no chance to make it right and change it all after death.
You remember that he said to Dives:
"There is a great gulf fixed."

"In view of the fact that every time your watch ticks two souls go into eternity, and that no one can tell the day nor the hour when the Son of Man cometh, why not come on out like a man, confess faith in Christ as your Saviour and live the Christian life which is the one God intended to fit your physical, mental and every natural set-up in your whole life, for "Against such there is no law."

Dr. Fife will preach Thursday night his noted sermon on "The Command of God Which Men Most Despise to Do." He will sing again with the world's finest guitar. The crowds increase nightly.

To Give Opposition

platform will say, who will run the campaign. The party out of power usually is divided, squabbling over all of these questions. The ins therefore prefer to remain quiet, letting the country concentrate its attention on the troubles of the outs.

That is what the President's managers are doing now. The louder the debate becomes among the Republicans, the more the Democrats seem disposed to surrender the whole stage to them.

The argument is that if the various Republican factions are not stirred up from outside, and not forced to divert some of their fire, they will be likely to bombard one another more vigorously and do greater damage within their own party.

accounting for the apparent Democratic backwardness in getting Mr. Roosevelt's reelection campaign in to high gear.

Democrats Getting Ready
The lack of explosions overhead however, should not be taken to mean that the Democratic organization is idle.

The work of tuning up for the coming test is proceeding quietly but on an extensive scale. Democratic headquarters in Washington has taken on new personnel, and added new floor space. It is a busy spot from morning to night.

Out in the states intensive inside work is well under way. Rivalries among local party leaders are being handled with as little fuss as possible, but with considerable firmness.

Because their party organization is a going concern, under known national leadership, the Democrats hope to get along head start in this sort of preparation while the Republicans are arguing.

That is one of the advantages a party in power always has. Of course it may or may not be a sufficient advantage to turn the scales, but it undoubtedly helps.

tically at a standstill.

Railroads In Market
In the first quarter of 1935, only 100 new freight cars were ordered built.
In the first three months of this year, the total was 8,920 cars. No new locomotives were ordered in the first quarter of 1935, while for the same period this year, 73 were bought.

Residential building was one of the first major lines of activity to go into its downward cycle, and one of the last to turn upward, but the upward twist now seems decisive. Contracts let in 37 states in the first quarter aggregated $123,885,000, up 15 per cent from the same period last year, 21 per cent from 1933. The total, however, still was only about one-fourth of the first three months of 1929.

Rents Go Up
Real estate authorities point to increasing rents, making property ownership more profitable, as an important straw in the wind. Says Walter H. Rose, president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards:

"Vacancies in single family home establishments are rapidly disappearing and rents are at 84.4 per cent of the 1926 level, compared with 69.8 per cent a year ago. Rents for apartments are 60.5 per cent of the 1926 level compared with 55.7 per cent this time last year."

STORIES IN STAMPS

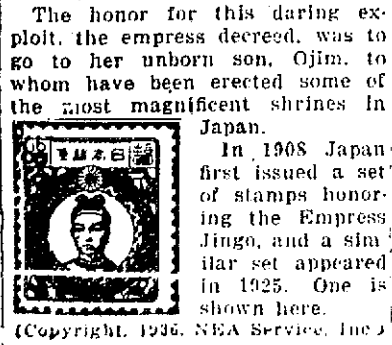

By I. S. Klein

IN Japanese homes, on May 5, the dolls and the images of great national heroes will be brought out and the exploits of those they represent related. Unique among the male group will be a lone female image--that of the great Empress Jingo, she from whom sprang the term that is applied to bellicose nationalists the world over.

For she it was who, in 201 A. D., led a Japanese invasion into Korea and became the guiding spirit of Japanese militarists. She was impelled to patriotic fervor by her vision of the gods. In her prayers, who directed her to the rich land of Shiraki (Korea) beyond the sea. The Mikado Chihai, her husband, ignored the portent and the gods decreed his death. So Jingo herself sought to carry out their plan. Dressed as a man, she led her forces across the sea, although she was soon to become a mother.

The honor for this daring exploit, the empress decreed, was to go to her unborn son, Ojima, to whom have been erected some of the most magnificent shrines in Japan.

The life of a westerner was saved when a bullet was deflected by a cigar lighter, which would seem to justify its existence.

There can be no extenuating circumstances in that dastardly mailing of bombs, since it appears they did not accompany income tax payments. For the past month, a Glens Falls, N. Y., man has lived on honey, whereas, during the depression, a number of men lived on their honey's parents. At the end of her working day, it would be embarrassing for that Florida nudist to turn to her file and not find, in Miscellaneous C, her clothes.

As a result of a shortage in France, frog-breeding birds boomed in Yugoslavia. Air shipments are made to Paris.

Mystery Mike and Lefty Williams Are Wrestling Headliners

Two sports ruffians, Mystery Mike and Lefty Williams appear in the main event of the South Walnut street wrestling show Thursday night. Excluding Gil LaCrosse, Mystery Mike appears to be about the roughest grappler to exhibit holds here in some time. He won the deciding fall here last Saturday night against Jack Lang.

The selection of Williams as his opponent gives rise to the expectation of much action. Williams appeared in Hope last summer and met some of the best of the light heavies. The semi-final Thursday night will be between Bunny Martin of Oklahoma and Tony Papino, New York Italian. The latter is a new comer to Hope fans.

The show starts at 8:15. W. C. Page will referee. Admission prices have been reduced to 25 cents.
